Jean Welz's architectural vision emerged during a period of immense cultural and technological change. Born in Switzerland in 1900, she studied architecture at a time when women were largely excluded from the profession. Undeterred, she defied societal norms and pursued her passion with unwavering determination, honing her skills under the tutelage of renowned architects such as Le Corbusier.

Her designs were characterized by a bold blend of modernism and brutalism, often featuring raw concrete surfaces, geometric forms, and an emphasis on natural light. Welz's buildings were not merely structures; they were expressions of her deep-seated belief in the transformative power of architecture.

Forgotten Masterpieces Resurface

"The Lost Architecture Of Jean Welz" meticulously documents Welz's most compelling lost works, many of which have vanished without a trace. Through painstaking research and collaboration with architectural archives, the book unearths hidden gems that have long been forgotten.

From the enigmatic House in Zurich, Switzerland, to the groundbreaking School in Paris, France, Welz's architectural legacy is revealed in its full glory. Each building is meticulously analyzed, providing a comprehensive understanding of her design principles, inspirations, and the challenges she faced as a female architect in a male-dominated field.
